Matt Osenga joined Goodman Allen Donnelly as Of Counsel in 2010, bringing with him extensive experience in intellectual property matters, including patent litigation and prosecution, invalidity and non-infringement opinions, licensing of patents and computer technology, as well as trademark and copyright protection.

Prior to joining the firm, Matt practiced patent law for 10 years at large international law firms in Washington, D.C. and Chicago, and at smaller law firms in Richmond.

He has represented large and small clients in a number of different technology areas, including materials science, such as polymers, coatings, and other chemical compositions, pharmaceuticals, food products, synthetic wicker, and various mechanical devices, such as aerodynamic devices for vehicles, razor blade coatings, currency denomination machines, playing card shufflers, automatic dumpster locks, radiators, heat transfer tube configuration, charged air coolers, and others.

Matt's patent prosecution practice encompasses all aspects of patent practice before the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, including the preparation and prosecution of patent applications, reexaminations, reissue application, examiner interviews, and preparing briefs and arguments for appeals and post-grant reviews before the Patent Trial and Appeal Board.

His litigation experience also includes the preparation of briefs, pleadings, motions, and expert reports, as well as assisting in discovery and witness preparation for trial. He has also prepared briefs and motions for appeals before the Federal Circuit.

Matt has been listed as a Virginia Super Lawyer® in Intellectual Property, Law and Politics, Virginia Super Lawyers Magazine and Richmond Magazine (2012-2016)
